Instructors' union vote

Non-tenure track faculty will vote on IEA Sept. 27 and 28

CORY FREEMAN
NEWS STRINGER

Non-tenure track faculty members will soon have an opportunity to vote whether to have union representation.

The Illinois Education Association has stepped in to offer NTT faculty union representation at SIUE. The IEA's primary issues are to promote job security and increase salary.

The vote for NTT faculty members to join IEA will be later this month.

There are about 300 NTT faculty members at SIUE, which includes lecturers and instructors. Lecturers have contracts that go from semester to semester, whereas instructors have contracts that are yearly.

One issue, according to organizer for IEA David Vitoff, is that there is no job security or long-term contracts. Another issue is when there are few instructors available and lecturers take on extra students to avoid hiring more instructors. Lecturers have less pay and don't receive paid health benefits.

Other issues include cost-of-living adjustment, merit pay, seniority pay and voice in shared governance at departmental, college and university levels, according to the IEA Web site, <http://ieanea.org>.

In April 2003, about 300 Illinois State University NTT faculty members voted to join the IEA. Their first contract has been ratified and achieves the two main concerns: real job security and a beginning of real salary improvement, according to the IEA Web site.

"The example at ISU shows that the process works," Vitoff said.

Other concerns achieved in the ISU contract are a health and safety policy, academic freedom and ethics protection, a workload definition and improved working conditions.

The SIUE NTT faculty members will have to pay the IEA dues if the NTT faculty decides to join. The dues would be roughly one-half the normal rate until a contract is negotiated.

Dues from NTT faculty members would pay for programs and services such as professional bargaining consulting, legal services, budget and salary research services and an annual overview of U.S. higher education.

One thing Vitoff wishes to stress is that "unions don't have to be confrontational. We're here to be proactive and positive."

Domestic partners can start their paperwork

TRAVIS ROSS
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

Just weeks after adopting a domestic partner policy giving eligible same-sex couples a break, SIUE has made forms available for interested couples to apply.

Couples are required to fill out the Statement of Domestic Partnership so the university can judge their eligibility. To be eligible for the policy, the statement says couples must be "each other's sole domestic partner and intend to remain so indefinitely."

Couples are also required to demonstrate shared financial obligations and a joint responsibility for each other's common welfare. This can be done by providing documentation of a joint checking account, joint credit account, joint ownership of a motor vehicle, joint mortgage, etc.

According to the statement, "The domestic partnership status is terminated as of its date of execution and that a copy of the statement has been mailed to the other partner by the party authorizing such action." In other words, if the couple was to break up the individual who does not work for the university will lose their benefits.

Benefits include insurance cost reimbursement program, tuition waiver for children, family medical leave, sick and bereavement leave, a wellness program, use of Lovejoy Library and recreation services and facilities.

The policy went into effect July 1. Similar policies have been adopted by the University of Illinois, Illinois State University and Western Illinois University.

The Statement of Domestic Partnership is available online at www.siu.edu/PERSONNEL/Benefits/dpartner.

Greeting for chancellor Wednesday in Meridian

KRISTEN REBER
NEWS EDITOR

Students, faculty, staff and retirees are invited to welcome Chancellor Vaughn Vandegrift and his wife, Sue Vandegrift, to the campus community next week.

A welcome reception will be from 3 to 6 p.m. Wednesday in the Meridian Ballroom in the Morris University Center.

"Since they are new to campus, this is just an opportunity to introduce yourself and welcome them to the campus," Office of the Chancellor secretary Joyce Brendle said.

Vandegrift and his wife lived in Georgia, where he served as provost and vice president for academic affairs and chief information officer for Georgia Southern University.

The Vandegrifts arrived on campus in early July and resided in Cougar Village for the summer while they waited for the closing date on their new home.

"They just now moved into their new home, just a couple weeks ago," Brendle said. "(Although the Vandegrifts moved to the area in July), we wanted to wait until there were more people on campus (to hold the reception). We wanted to wait until classes began and there were more people in the academic community to attend."

There are three new student organizations on campus after approval by the Student Senate Friday.

Constitutions for Women of Ambition, the Physics Club and Collegiate Entrepreneurs Organization were approved by senators at their meeting in the Goshen Lounge of the Morris University Center.

Women of Ambition aims to

Chill out in the buildings

Anyone who has ever talked to someone who lives in or has visited Illinois knows that one of the likely conversations to come up is the weather. Not because talking about the weather is small talk, but because Illinois weather is unpredictable. The climate changes from day to day. If anyone ever complains to you about this, I recommend you tell him or her to spend a day at SIUE. Here, the climate changes from room to room.

Every time I walk into one of the buildings I am reminded of how strange the temperature controls in them are. You could be in the basement of Peck Hall and need a sweater and then go to the first or second floor and you're fine without one. Walk up to the third floor though, and you are most likely back in a cold front.

I'm never surprised to see students walking around campus with sweaters, long sleeves or jackets. In fact, I don't leave home without a jacket. I know that if I do, I will be slightly chilled by the time I leave at least one of my classes.

But, it varies from room to room as well as floor to floor. You could think that an entire floor would maintain a certain temperature. However, if you walk to the second floor of the end up freezing your fingers off in the rooms that aren't.

I'd like to take a moment to speak to whomever is in charge of regulating the temperatures in these buildings. I'm sure you have heard the complaints before, and I'm sure that you, too, suffer the ill effects of a cold office.

But you don't know the meaning of the word frostbite until you have spent at least an hour and a half in the carpeted room on the second floor of Dunham Hall. You wouldn't expect a room with carpet on the walls to be cold, right? I have yet to find a room on this campus that can match the temperature in there, which always seems to be about 50 degrees. Maybe there is one, and I just never had a class in it, but Morris University Center, I guarantee that it is at least 10 degrees warmer than inside the Alestle office on the same floor.

It seems that whenever I walk into a new classroom, all I hear people talk about is how cold that classroom is. Then the weather changes to fall and winter and suddenly every room is boiling hot, or you that Dunham Hall room is the best freezer you can find – it holds up to 60 frozen students at a time.

I know the university has devised a great plan to regulate temperature with a boiler system in every building, and I'm sure that it will change things for the better, but I'm not holding my breath until they get installed and are running properly. Until then, I'll just keep my jacket close by, along with a pair of mittens and a scarf.

When women vote, women will win

ANN ARBOR, Mich.(UWIRE) — As the United States and United Nations have helped Iraq and Afghanistan form new governments, they have taken steps to ensure that women will be proportionally represented. Meanwhile, here at home, the total number of women in the federal legislature barely hits 14 percent of Congress.

While women in America have made enormous strides over the last century in higher education and expanding job opportunities, we still live in a country where the men make the rules. How do we level the playing field? First, let's vote.

Remember 2000? Remember those 537 votes that determined who would be our president? Well guess what, on Election Day four years ago, 6 million women stayed home. And since then, we have watched the administration turn back the clock on our rights as women, at home and abroad. We have seen the loss of millions of dollars of funding for family planning and education for women overseas. We have seen limitations on the ability of women serving our country in the military to receive medical abortions. We have seen hundreds of thousands of women across the country fall deeper and deeper into poverty as unemployment rates skyrocket and welfare funding remains stagnant. And we have seen our government redefine comprehensive sex education as "abstinence only," limiting the ability of young women to even learn that they have options.

Without delving into party politics, we as women need to ask ourselves: Does this administration represent our values? We need to think long and hard about what will be at stake in the next four years. One retirement on the U.S. Supreme Court means that our right to control our own bodies could be gone in an instant. Title IX, which grants us equal rights and protection in areas including, but not limited to high school and see VOTE, page 7

Political Cartoon

college athletics, could well be eliminated by those who define female athletic programs as "special rights for women."

On an economic level, we live in a country where a woman with a college degree makes less money on average than a man who dropped out of high school. We need an administration that will focus on the issues of equal pay, equal education, health insurance for all (including coverage of contraceptives) and the promise of a living wage. We believe in national security and appropriate defense spending, but we cannot continue to sacrifice every domestic initiative that may allow women to continue to make the hard-earned gains that we deserve.

When women vote, women win. It's a slogan that you will likely see in various forms throughout the next two months. While I encourage every woman to take it literally – to run for office, to get into that "Old Boys'" network and shake things up – you can start by casting your ballot on Nov. 2. Too many women fought for our right to vote, only to die before we achieved it. We owe it to them to exercise this crucial right, at this crucial time. In the upcoming November election, our lives and the lives of our sisters worldwide depend on it.

While at college, most students face challenging decisions regarding relationships.

Although some might find it difficult enough to maintain relationships close in proximity, many others try to sustain long-distance relationships while at school.

According to biology major Leamond Sloan, if it's a strong relationship, it will work, but only for a certain amount of time. Sloan thinks people need to spend time together in order for it to work.

Yet, some ideas that may help to keep a long-distance relationship healthy and strong all focus around communication. Remain honest in expressing your feelings and desires. Continuously staying open with each other can also alleviate many frustrations.

Also, because of the distance factor, both people need to be more understanding of each other. For example, don't automatically get mad because you have not heard from the other in a while. Sure, you may miss him or her, but consider your own schedule at school and how busy you are because your significant other may be just as busy.

Timothy Goldman, mass communications major, said, "For the most part, it's been my experience that without sacrifices being made for both people, long-distance relationships tend to not work."

However, according to Ashley Whisenton, an accounting major, being apart only makes it that much more enjoyable when you see each other again.

"Long-distance relationships are good because I'm a firm believer that absence makes the heart grow fonder," Whisenton said.

However, if you're the type of person who agrees with the out-of-sight, out-of-mind ideology or you want to focus more on school and activities, then perhaps a relationship isn't in your best interest.

"Relationships distract you from school," sophomore Stacy Pearson said.

She added that while in school you have other interests to focus on. A relationship can take you away from schoolwork or those interests, and the relationship itself could suffer.

In the article, "Are Long-Distance Relationships Healthy For Students?" Nikia L. Byers of Xavier University said, "It's important that students prioritize their lives and choose only what is healthy for them."

Both people need to be on the same page before making the decision to maintain either a long-distance or any other type of relationship.

"I think long-distance relationships are rare and hard to find, but they do exist and can work," Carl B. Mitchell, a political science major, said. "The key to maintaining a healthy relationship is to have 100 percent trust on both sides."

Michele Johnson, a psychology major, agreed with Mitchell. She said, "a long distance relationship can work if both people make it work; it depends on the couple."

According to the Web site www.Bellaonline.com, Dinah S. Temple, the BellaOnline relationship editor, said, "Every relationship worth having is worth preserving and nurturing. All it takes is the will to keep your partner's desires focused on you and vice versa. Have fun and be diligent and happy."

The answer to whether long-distance relationships can work is solely dependent upon the people involved. For some it has worked and for others it hasn't.

In accordance with advice given from some SIUE students and staff, any relationship takes time and effort on both ends. If both parties provide equal effort, the relationship should be successful.

For additional advice and forums on healthy relationships, visit the Web sites at www.loveshack.org and www.conversly.com. Students may also call and set up a personal appointment with Counseling Services at 650-2197.

Fraternities seek new brothers

THOMAS C. PHILLIPS III
LIFESTYLES STRINGER

The sorority women have had their turn for recruitment, and now it's the men's turn.

Fraternity Recruitment will be Monday through Friday in the Morris University Center.

Consisting of four Interfraternity Council Fraternities, Beta Tau, Alpha Kappa Lambda, Phi Kappa Psi and Sigma Pi, the recruitment process looks to provide a variety of activities for students throughout the five-day period.

Tables will be set up to give a schedule of events for each organization.

Since its foundation at the University of California-Berkeley in April 1914, Alpha Kappa Lambda Fraternity has expanded its membership to include more than 22,000 members in 76 chapters across the United States. The Beta Tau chapter at SIUE was founded in 1989, and participates in such activities as cystic fibrosis fundraising, its ever-popular 'Go To Hell' Halloween party, and its 'These Hands Don't Hurt' domestic violence prevention fundraiser, among others.

According to Greek Life Director John Davenport, Alpha Kappa Lambda is a groundbreaking organization on SIUE's campus.

"Alpha Kappa Lambda was one of the first of the IFC chapters to really push campus involvement through their 'Back To School' concert, and other sponsored activities on campus," Davenport said.

Phi Kappa Psi is the 17th oldest men's fraternity, founded in 1852. It has had nearly 100,000 members in 148 years of service and an average chapter size of 39 members and pledges, according to its Web site, <http://www.siu.edu/STACTV/PKP/index.htm>.

The Web site of Phi Kappa Psi states that the fraternity is continuing its tradition of "recognizing and valuing the diversity of all, the fraternity unites the principles and traditions of our past with the resources and creativity of our present."

Davenport said the chapter, although the newest IFC organization at SIUE, is making an impact in a short time period.

"It's the newest IFC chapter at SIUE," Davenport said. "However, they have been very successful in recruiting, as well as being a well-rounded chapter."

Sigma Pi Fraternity, International, officially founded Feb. 11, 1907, is the only international fraternity on campus, with a chapter established in Canada.

Davenport said the organization is taking steps to make traditions on campus that the entire campus can enjoy, while maintaining high academic standards.

"They have the highest fraternity GPA for spring semester 2004, and well above the all men's average," Davenport said. "They've succeeded in making their annual pig roast a campus tradition as well."

Sigma Phi Epsilon, founded Nov. 1, 1901, at the University of Richmond, boasts the largest undergraduate membership of any men's organization in the last two decades, according to its national Web site, www.sigep.org.

Besides founding its own educational foundation, the organization has also been growing rapidly, establishing 30 chapters in the last three years.

"This is a chapter that has made tremendous bounds in the past year," Davenport said. "They have distinguished themselves through academic achievement and recommitment to their ideals of the balanced man."

For more information on fraternity recruitment activities throughout the week, stop by the information table at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the Goshen Lounge, or contact Kimmel Leadership Office at 650-2686.

Choreographer and lighting designer David Covey comes to create dance pieces

SONY PRIYA

David Covey has come to SIUE with a mission – to create new dance pieces.

Covey is a professor in the Dance Department at Ohio State University. He teaches lighting design and production, linking it closely with the choreographic process.

Covey serves as production manager for the OSU Dance Department and has many roles outside the university as well. He serves on the board of Ohio dance, designing for the winter season's Jazz Tap Ensemble at the Joyce Theater, and he serves as the production manager for the Bates College Dance Festival.

During his visit to SIUE, Covey will conduct rehearsals with students and create four types of dance pieces, which will be performed as part of "Dance In Concert" in November.

Auditions for this event were Aug. 30 in Dunham Hall. A group of 10 students, made up of eight women and two men, were selected. Covey will spend the next two weeks working exclusively with these students.

"Every piece will be different from the other," Covey said. "The students have to make decisions and think every night."

JESSICA BALADAD/ALESTLE

Visiting dance artist David Covey demonstrates a dance technique to students during a rehearsal at the dance department in Dunham Hall. Covey is visiting for two weeks to work with students on four pieces he has choreographed for the upcoming Dance in Concert production.

Covey has been in lighting design for 25 years and has been working with choreography for 12 years. He said he got bored with the gravity that keeps the dancers grounded and wants to explore the space above the dancers' heads, which most choreographers won't do.

Covey also works with kinetic landscapes where he combines painting, sculpting and choreography. According to Covey, he feels creating such dance pieces is an extension of his skills and he is pleased to work at SIUE.

"I like it here," Covey said. "The students are very receptive. It's not only fun doing the piece, but it also gives the satisfaction of giving skills and new ways of thinking about dance to students."

Covey's students are just as happy to work with him.

"He is fun, quirky and gives his dancers a lot of freedom," one of Covey's students said.

Covey is the designer for the New York City-based and world-renowned Merce Cunningham Dance Company. In 1998, he received the most prestigious award for dance, the Bessie Award, for his work with Merce Cunningham.

He has designed shows at the Paris Opera Granier, Brooklyn Academy of Music Opera House, the Kennedy Center and has done design work for Mikail Baryshnikov as well.

Covey has also worked with Bebe Miller, Liz Lerman, David Neumen, and Laurie Anderson, all major players in dance in America.

Film fest features culture

Students, faculty and staff get the chance to experience multicultural films this semester. The Campus Activities Board is sponsoring a free International Film Festival.

Movies will be shown once a month at 6 p.m. Mondays in Abbot Auditorium in the basement of Lovejoy Library.

Guests will be served free popcorn and soda.

CAB Multicultural Programs Chair Melanie Rodrigues said

CAB chose Abbot Auditorium to help create a theatrical aura.

The International Film Festival begins Sept. 13 with the showing of "Osama," a film that deals with a young Afghan girl's fear of the Taliban.

Movies include "Real Women Have Curves" Oct. 4, "Amelie" Nov. 8 and "Iron Monkey" Dec. 6.

"Real Women Have Curves" portrays the challenges a Mexican-American teenager faces as she adjusts her cultural heritage in mainstream America.

"Amelie" is about a shy girl trying to identify herself in the world.

"Iron Monkey" is an action flick about a young Chinese hero.

Most of these movies have won international awards.

"Some are based on true stories," Rodrigues said.

CAB plans to continue the film festival through the spring semester.

If feedback is positive, the event is likely to continue next fall as well.

Taste of Culture, presented by the Campus Activities Board, will feature a Martial Arts Showdown from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday in the Goshen Lounge.

This free event gives students an opportunity to get a glimpse of other cultures through entertainment.

Melanie Rodrigues, the Multicultural Programs chair of CAB, said the Taste of Culture is a series of events that happens three times a semester. In the past, African and flamenco musicians and dancers have been featured.

This Taste of Culture will showcase two St. Louis martial arts performers. The St. Louis Ki Society and Capoeira Brasil of St. Louis will focus on the cultural history of martial arts while providing opportunities for interaction between students and the performers.

"Martial arts is used widely in today's world, be it in movies or self-defense classes," Rodrigues said. "I think it would be beneficial for students to understand the deeper meaning,

The well-known St. Louis-based rock band Ludo was successful in alluring a large audience with their performance Thursday on the Stratton Quadrangle.

The Quad was filled with plenty of music lovers tapping their feet to the music. Many students, running to their classes, could not resist stopping to enjoy the performance.

Fans bought the band's compact discs, T-shirts and stickers on sale in the Quad.

They performed a total of 11 tracks including three new songs. The last song, "Good will hunting by myself," drew cheers and hollers from the audience.

The band was enthusiastic and lively throughout the show throwing jokes and pranks at the audience.

Two of the band members, Andrew Volpe and Tim Ferrell, had previously performed at SIUE.

"I had a lot of fun performing here," Tim Convoy said. "It's always great to perform in a school with the students moving around."

The band is looking forward to their Friday performance at the Cosa Loma Ballroom in St. Louis where they will show the music video of "Hum Along."

Mens soccer dominates Gannon, falls to Findlay

AJIT OZA
SPORTS REPORTER

A spectator of the two games the SIUE men's soccer team played Saturday and Sunday could have made the observation that the weekend belonged to sophomore midfielder Victor Pacheco.

Pacheco collected three goals and two assists during two games in the University of Wisconsin-Parkside Men's Soccer Puma Classic. For his efforts, Pacheco was named the offensive Most Valuable Player of the Puma Classic.

"Three goals and three assists are quite nice, I just wish he would have been able to spread them out. What I liked about his goals, is that they were not his typical goals, each one was placed in the side netting," head coach Ed Huneke said. "That was encouraging, he usually tends to rely on his power and that is something we have been trying to get him not to do as much. I hope that we continue to see that type of play from Victor."

In the first game of the weekend against Gannon University, the Cougars were able to get two goals in the first 20 minutes of the game and picked up the 5-0 victory against the Golden Knights.

The first goal came in the 11th minute when freshman forward Adam Lanter picked up his third goal of the season off a pass from Pacheco.

"I was not really expecting the play that Adam has been giving us so far. But it is always a pleasant surprise and in his case, Adam is the man," Huneke said.

Pacheco, in the 20th minute, scored his first goal of three goals in the game when he was able to take a pass from junior forward Tim Collico. The Golden Knights had to read just after the two early goals from the Cougars, which fell directly into the Cougars game plan.

Labor Day weekend proved to be challenging for the Cougar volleyball team, as it played one nail-biter after another to come out 2-2 in the Western Missouri Tournament this past weekend.

The Cougars played hard for their victories last Friday against Northwest Missouri State University Bearcats and the Emporia University Lady Hornets, each ending 3-2 in five sets.

On Saturday the Cougars closed out the tournament with losses to Missouri Western State College Griffons and Pittsburg State University Gorillas 1-3 in four sets each.

Head coach Todd Gober said he was amazed by the rigorous competition these teams displayed, especially in their first two wins.

"They were great wins, but I was overall impressed by the competition," Gober said. "And there were nice big hitters from these teams and they absolutely changed their scheme of play and were prepared for us. I have to give the coaches tremendous credit for their effort."

Despite the losses to the Griffons and the Gorillas, Gober liked what he saw from the opposition, and at the same time noticed a few flaws the Cougars displayed in these two matches.

"Against Missouri Western, we were more physical in our game than they were, and we manhandled them last year. It was disappointing, but we found some flaws from the tourney we need to work on," Gober said. "We were not used to playing longer rallies to this point, so we will need to learn to play those in the long term."

Against Northwest Missouri State University, the Cougars fought through five matches for the win. The junior tandem of middle hitter Heather Bonde, and outside hitters Kindra Westendorf and Shannon Winkeler led in the attack with 17 kills. Junior setter Krystal Majernik helped the team out tremendously with 49 assists, and junior outside hitter Allison Buss led the defense with 23 digs.

SIUE slipped past Emporia State 3-2. Bonde again brought on the offense with 18 kills, and nailed down four service aces. Buss rang up 21 digs.

Saturday was an opposite day for the Cougars, and though they played with real intensity, they fell short 1-3 to Missouri Western. Bonde made 21 kills, Majernik had three aces and Buss had 26 digs in the effort.

The Cougars closed out the tournament Saturday afternoon against Pittsburg State, but dropped another close one, 1-3. Bonde and junior middle hitter Tina Talsma were a big portion of the Cougars offensive efforts, combining for 29 kills.

On defense two players reached double digits in digs. Buss had 23 digs while sophomore outside hitter Beth Degreef chipped in with 19.

The cornfields of Indiana never looked better in the summertime than it did Saturday when the womens soccer team beat West Virginia University Wesleyan Bobcats 2-0 in Indianapolis.

The Cougars barraged the Bobcats with 13 shots in the first period, notably five by senior forward Ann Crawford. Crawford netted the first of her two goals with 31 minutes and 22 seconds on the clock. Picking up the assist was junior midfielder Kelly Dill.

Crawford nabbed her second goal of the day, and second on the season, with 32 minutes left in the game. She was assisted in the play by senior midfielder Jackie Thomann.

Head coach Lynda Bowers was very pleased by the results, especially with the defense.

"It was a good win for us, as we needed to win against a regional team," Bowers said. "And, this game really played well for us on defense as we needed to work on the backfield, which spun into our offense. Defense was our main focus."

The defense made it an easy day for senior goalkeeper Jessica Brown who did not record a save in the first half. Freshman Kim Roady only recorded three in the shutout.

The Cougar offense had a stiff day, shooting 0 for 12 and being shut down by Grand Valley goaltender Erin Murphy. As a result, they fell 1-0 to the Lakers.

Senior halfback Angela Light led the charge with five shots.

Coach Bowers expected this game to be a challenge, but was impressed by her team's work ethic.

"Really, we had nothing to lose against Grand Valley, as they are nationally ranked and played extremely well in the regional last year, but overall we improved upon many things at practice," Bowers said. "We matched well against them, but we just could not score."

The team is 1-2 on the season and will work on regaining its swagger at 2 p.m. Friday as the Cougars take on Mercyhurst University at Ralph Korte Stadium.

were able to develop a game plan that was effective against us," Huneke said.

The Cougars continued to mount the pressure on the Golden Knights in the second half, again dominating the flow of the game. The first of three goals in the second half came in the 68th minute from Pacheco off of a pass from Collico. Pacheco picked up the hat trick in 77th minute, this time off a pass from junior forward Pete Cacciatore. Cacciatore was able to find the back of the net in 87th minute, to make the final score 5-0.

On Sunday the Cougars faced off against the Oilers from the University of Findlay, the National Soccer Coaches Association of America's sixth ranked team. Entering the game, the Cougars were ranked 18th in the NSCAA poll. "We felt that we could handle them both before and after the game, but did have a hard time dealing with the packed in defense that they had," Huneke said.

The Oilers were able to score two goals within two minutes of each other in the first half and they would be able to hold on to pick up the 2-1 victory against the Cougars. After Findlay was able to score the two early goals, the Oilers packed in the defense, sometimes putting as many as nine players on the defensive side of the field.

"Findlay really made it difficult for us to do anything, putting eight to nine guys in the defensive side of the field. They also decided to beat on Pete (Cacciatore) a little," Huneke said. "Again we have to learn how to deal with that type of tactic, because many teams will call Findlay and see how they were able to be successful against us," Huneke added.

The Cougars were able to score in the 51st minute, when senior back Michael Burgund was able to score off of a corner kick taken by Pacheco. The goal would be the only score that the Cougars would take.

With the loss, the Cougars dropped to 3-1-0 for the season. "The key thing to take from this loss is that we must learn as we go and we will adjust accordingly," Huneke said.

The Cougars will be in action at home this Friday against the University of Missouri-Rolla at Ralph Korte Stadium, with game time slated for 7 p.m.

KANE'S

MATT KANE

The key to scoring points in a fantasy football league is attacking the weaknesses of players and team defenses.

Week 1 of the NFL gives fantasy team owners many chances to score big points in their league and jump out to a big lead. Here are my choices for players who should have big, opening-day games.

First choice is Torrey Holt, a St. Louis Rams wide receiver. Holt having a big day is nothing new for fans. Yes, the Rams offensive line is suspect. Look for Coach Mike Martz to try to stretch the Arizona Cardinals' defense. Holt is the Rams' best option to score on the deep pass. The Cardinals did little to upgrade their pass defense, ranked 29th a year ago.

My second choice is Jamal Lewis, a Baltimore Ravens running back. The Ravens face the Browns during opening week in a rematch that features Lewis, who rushed for a combined 500 yards in two games against Cleveland last year. Lewis averaged a first down every two rushes last year and again looks to be the concentration point for a Raven offense with a dismal passing game.

Third choice is Chad Pennington, a New York Jets quarterback. The Jets face a Cincinnati Bengal defense that underwent an offseason overhaul. Bengal Coach Marvin Lewis is one of the best defensive minds in football, though he doesn't have good enough pieces to put together the type of defense he'd like.

My last choice is Miami Dolphins defense. In Week 1, the Dolphins take on the Tennessee Titans. During the offseason, the Titans lost their starting running back and arguably their best wide receiver. Tennessee may win the game, but Miami's defense will put up some big numbers because Steve McNair has no help on offense.

E-mail me at kaneskorner@hotmail.com for any fantasy football questions.

That's all from Kane's Korner.
